I. INDIAN CULTURE

A History of Indian Literature, by M. Winternitz, Ph.D., Professor of Indology and Ethnology at the German University of Prague, translated into English from the Original German by Mrs. S. Ketkar and revised by the Author. The only Authorized Translation into English.

This monumental work of Prof. Winternitz is too well-known to need any introduction to the public. In order to make it accessible to those interested in Indian Literature but not well-versed in German, the Calcutta University has undertaken the publication of an English version. The whole work will occupy several volumes.

Vol. I. Introduction, the Veda, the National Epics, the Puranas and the Tantras. Demy 8vo pp. 653. 1927.
Rs. 10-8.

Vol. II. Buddhist Literature and Jaina Literature. Demy
8vo pp. 673. 1934. Rs. 12.

Vol. III. In the Press.

Some Problems of Indian Literature, by the same author.
Royal 8vo pp. 130. 1925. Rs. 2-8.

Contents:—The Age of the Veda—Ascetic Literature in Ancient India—Ancient Indian Ballad Poetry—Indian Literature and World Literature—Kautilya Arthashastra—Bhāṣa.

Sino-Indica, by Prabodhchandra Bagchi, M.A., D.Lit.

Dr. Bagchi has undertaken a series of publications called Sino-Indica. Study of Chinese documents relating to India will be published in this series from time to time. As the researches were begun in France, the first two volumes had to be written in French. The forthcoming volumes of the series will be, however, written in English. Only the second part of the "Le Canon Bouddhique en Chine" will be written in French.

Vol. I (Le Canon Bouddhique en Chine), Part I. (In French). Royal 8vo pp. 436 + lii. 1927. Rs. 15.

It is the first systematic work which deals with the history of translations of Buddhist texts into Chinese and their translators. The work contains the biographies of all Indian, Iranian, Sogdian and other monks who went to China in the early centuries of the Christian era. A history of their activities, as preserved in the Chinese documents, is given. The first part covers a period of six hundred years, first century A.D. to sixth century (589) A.D. The second part which is now ready for the Press will take the history down to the thirteenth century A.D. The third part will contain a comprehensive index of all Chinese and Sanskrit titles.

Vol. II (Deux Lexiques Sanskrit-Chinois), Part I. Double Crown 8vo pp. 336. 1929. Rs. 15.

It is a critical edition of two ancient Sanskrit-Chinese lexicons of the sixth and seventh centuries A.D., compiled by a Sri-Indian monk, Li-Yen, and a Chinese monk, the famous Yi-tsing.

Le Canon Bouddhique en Chine, Tome I.—"The author has brought together, everything he could, on the biographical actions of the translators and gives a register of their works. The large number of references to the literature that might come in question is to be specially congratulated . . . This handsome work will have the recognition everywhere which it deserves, and it is hoped that the second volume may follow the first as early as possible." (Translated from German.—Orientalistische Literaturzeitung, 1929, 2.)

"His important work does honour to him and his teachers. . . a fresh proof of the eminent talents of the Bengali race." (From French—Revue Bibliographique, 1929, October, Bruxelles.)

"An important contribution . . . These are some of the important informations from this historical study with which it is full." (From French—Revue des Sciences Philosophiques.)

"Work of great value that makes an important contribution to the history of Chinese Buddhism." (From French—Chronique d'Histoire des Religions.)

"He has been able to bring out this first volume of a magnum opus which indicates once more the importance of Buddhism in the history of India and testifies to the sound preparation of the author. . . This is a schematic history of the spread of Buddhism and with it, of Indian culture into China . . . One of the best achievements of Buddhist scholarship, the first contribution of young India to the systematic and comparative study of Buddhism."—Prof. G. Tucci (Indian Historical Quarterly, Vol. 2.)

The Evolution of Indian Polity, by R. Shama Sastri, B.A., Ph.D., M.R.A.S., Curator, Government Oriental Library, Mysore. Demy 8vo pp. 192. 1920. (Slightly damaged.) Reduced price Rs. 4-8.

Contains a connected history of the growth and development of political institutions in India, compiled mainly from the Hindu Sastras. The author being the famous discoverer and translator of the Kautiliya Arthashastra, it may be no exaggeration to call him one of the authorities on Indian Polity.

Contents:—I. Tribal State of Society. II. Elective Monarchy. III. The Origin of the Kshatriyas. IV. The People's Assembly. V. The Duties and Prerogatives of the Kings and Priests. VI. The Effect of Jainism and Buddhism on the Political Condition of India. VII. The Empire-building policy of the Politicians of the Kautilya Period. VIII. Espionage. IX. Theocratic Despotism. X. The Condition of the People—Intellectual, Spiritual and Economical.

".....The titles of the lectures will indicate the wealth of information contained in them.....Some of the facts mentioned by Mr. Sastri will be an eye-opener to most people, who are fond of imagining that Indians have always been 'vain dreamers of an empty day,' occupying themselves with things of the Great Beyond, supremely contemptuous of mundane affairs, regarding them as Maya, illusion.....All desirous of knowing the conditions of life in Ancient India should read carefully this fascinating volume, which is one more evidence of the splendid work that the Post-Graduate teachers of the Calcutta University are doing."—Hindustan Review, July, 1923.

Social Organisation in North-East India in Buddha's Time, by Richard Fick (translated by Sisirkumar Maitra, M.A., Ph.D.). Demy 8vo pp. 390. 1920. Rs. 7-8.

"Dr. Fick's Die Soziale Gliederung im Nordöstlichen Indien Zu Buddhas Zeit has, for many years, been of invaluable assistance to all interested in the social and administrative history of Buddhist India. But those ignorant of German were unable to make use of that book and their warm gratitude will be extended to Dr. Maitra for his eminently readable translation. The book is too well-known to need any review; suffice it to say that the translation is worthy of the book. Now that this scholarly work is made available in English, it should find a larger circulation."—Hindustan Review, July, 1923.

"A most valuable book" Sir J. A. Green

It is a most valuable book and I am very glad to possess a copy. Indeed for some weeks I had been trying to find a good Indian edition but had failed. Mr. Bagchi has done a very good job. It is thus important to have the important concepts of Indian thought and much other material in a single volume. The book is a welcome addition to Prof. S. K. Mitra's and Dr. S. N. Mukherjee's History of Indian Thought.

Dr. Bagchi has performed a useful service by explaining the import and significance of the various concepts of Indian thought. The book is a most valuable addition to the literature of Indian thought and is a most welcome addition to the library of every student of Indian thought.

Prof. Bagchi has explained the concepts of Indian thought as they are in a very clear and simple manner. The book is a most valuable addition to the literature of Indian thought and is a most welcome addition to the library of every student of Indian thought.

The History of Pre-Buddhist Indian Philosophy, by D. M. Datta, M.A., Ph.D., London. Royal Soc.
pp. 468. 1921. Rs. 10-8.

The Vedas are a collection of hymns and grow in a linear fashion from the Vedas to the Bhagavad Gita and finally to the Upanishads. The Vedas are the earliest of the texts and the Bhagavad Gita is the work of a later sage. The Upanishads are the last of the texts.

The first of these is the fact that the C_{60} molecule is a truncated icosahedron, which is a polyhedron with 32 faces, 60 vertices,
 and 90 edges. The faces are composed of 12 regular pentagons and 20 regular hexagons.
 The second fact is that the C_{60} molecule is a highly symmetric molecule, with a symmetry group of I_h . The third fact is that the C_{60} molecule is a highly stable molecule, with a high bond energy and a high melting point.

Administrative System of the Marathas (from original sources) by the late Mr. S. Sundramath, Sen. M. A.
and Denu. 8vo pp. 7-0. 1925. Rs. 10.

It is an excellent account of the political and administrative system of the Marathas. The author has done a very good work in translating this work into English. The work is very well written and is very interesting to read. It is a very good source of information for the study of the Maratha Empire.

31. It is a common belief that the more one knows about a subject, the more one is likely to be wrong. This is a fallacy. Knowledge is not a straight line, but a spiral. As one moves forward, one's understanding of a subject deepens, and one's mistakes become more refined. It is not the amount of knowledge that determines the accuracy of one's conclusions, but the quality of the reasoning process.

The theory advanced in this book provides a philosophy of multiple personality. It explains how the external self of man is. The author explains the nature of the internal self which is that of a multiple personality. It is not a matter of personality but a matter of the self. The theory of the self is the theory of the self.

The Case for Financial Justice to Bengal, by J. N. Gupta, M.A., I.C.S. (retd.), Demy two pp. 104 1952 Re 1-0.

A monograph dealing with the claims of Bengal for a redress of the injustice of depriving her of the major portion of her revenues and leaving her with totally inadequate and insufficient resources and reducing her to a position of marked inferiority as compared with the other provinces of India. Tracing the early revenue history of the Indian provinces the book shows the financial inequities of the rest of India to Bengal and the gradual depletion of the income allotted to Bengal, owing to the adoption of fundamentally wrong and inequitable principles of the division of the Indian revenues between the Provinces and the Central Government. The largely disastrous effects of this unjust treatment on the material and political progress of the provinces have been described and a strong case made out that without a fairer distribution of her revenue there is no hope for Bengal in any scheme of administration however advanced.

Kavikankan Chandi is one of the most important books of the Middle Bengali Literature for many reasons. It may be considered to be an historical document about the social, religious political, economical, commercial and ethnological conditions of the Hindu society. The late Balchandra Sen, who is also one of the joint authors of the text of Kusankar Chandra, has given a very elaborate commentary on the text with philological notes and has traced the history of the principal gods and goddesses of the Hindu pantheon from the very earliest times up to the present times. He also has history of the times, the political and other conditions of the then Bengal as may be gleaned from the text. For these reasons these two volumes have become an indispensable work for the student of the Middle Ages, especially of the early part of the black of these periods.

Foreword to Mukhopadhyay Papers—My acquaintance with the author of these papers began in 1904, when I was invited to deliver a paper at the Calcutta University Conference. I was then struck by the originality and depth of his work, and I have since been privileged to know him more intimately.

It is a pleasure to me to see that the Calcutta University has been able to publish his papers in a volume which will be a valuable addition to the library of every student of mathematics. The papers are of a high standard of originality and are of great interest to all who are concerned with the foundations of geometry.

Dynastic History of Northern India, (Early Medieval Period) Vol. II by Dr. H. C. Ray, M.A., Ph.D.
Royal 8vo pp. 628 pages price Rs. 15

While this volume marks the beginning of the political history of the various dynasties which ruled in Northern India during the transition from classical period to the beginning of the early medieval period, it also contains a valuable survey of the history of these dynasties and their political and social life. The book is the nucleus of the study of the early medieval period and its study is of great importance to the student of Indian history.

Though this volume is a continuation of the first volume, it has got its own character and is a very interesting study with a lot of interesting material which is of great value to the student of the Imperial History.

I feel that I am a very poor man, and I am very poor in every way. I am poor in my mind, in my body, in my soul, and in my spirit. I am poor in my family, in my friends, in my country, and in my world. I am poor in my life, in my death, in my resurrection, and in my eternal life. I am poor in my hope, in my faith, in my love, and in my charity. I am poor in my wisdom, in my knowledge, in my understanding, and in my insight. I am poor in my strength, in my power, in my might, and in my glory. I am poor in my honor, in my respect, in my esteem, and in my reputation. I am poor in my name, in my fame, in my fame, and in my fame. I am poor in my life, in my death, in my resurrection, and in my eternal life. I am poor in my hope, in my faith, in my love, and in my charity. I am poor in my wisdom, in my knowledge, in my understanding, and in my insight. The growth and development of the Bengali literature from the pre-Buddhist period to the present. The pre-Buddhist period is characterized by the use of Sanskrit and Pali. The Buddhist period is characterized by the use of Bengali. The post-Buddhist period is characterized by the use of Bengali and Sanskrit. The Bengali literature has a long and rich history. It has been influenced by many different cultures and religions. The Bengali literature has a unique character of its own. It is a blend of the old and the new. It is a blend of the local and the foreign. It is a blend of the past and the present. The Bengali literature is a treasure trove of knowledge and wisdom. It is a source of inspiration and motivation for all who read it. It is a source of pride and honor for all who love it. The Bengali literature is a part of our heritage. It is a part of our identity. It is a part of our soul. We must cherish it and protect it. We must pass it on to future generations. We must make it a part of our lives. We must make it a part of our hearts. We must make it a part of our dreams. The Bengali literature is a gift from God. It is a gift from our ancestors. It is a gift from our friends. It is a gift from our future. We must treasure it. We must cherish it. We must protect it. We must pass it on. We must make it a part of our lives. We must make it a part of our hearts. The Rt. Hon'ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru (Allahabad): "Sir Viswanath Iyer is one of the most thoughtful writers and anything coming from his pen is bound to attract considerable attention. I have read considerable portions of this book since it arrived and admired the presentation of the subject a great deal."

The Times Literary Supplement (London): "The thesis is full of interest and is treated with the knowledge of affairs and in the liberal spirit which Sir Viswanath has often displayed on public platforms and in the Legislative Assembly."
